Title

[Introduction]

Topic: Ease your reader into the essay. Don't just tell us what's going on. Show us, so that we are prepared for the complex argument you are going to present.

Two-sentence summary: Make sure you tell us what text we are working with and the necessary information about that text (author, year of publication, plus any other relevant information).

Thesis: (last sentence of the intro paragraph)

[1st Body Paragraph]

Claim:

Illustrate: “ ” (citation).

Analyze: (Your Analysis should be the bulk of body paragraphs)

Repeat I & A as necessary to make your argument.

[2nd Body Paragraph]

Claim:

Illustrate: “ ” (citation).

Analyze: (Your Analysis should be the bulk of body paragraphs)

Repeat I & A as necessary to make your argument.

[3rd Body Paragraph]

Claim:

Illustrate: “ ” (citation).

Analyze: (Your Analysis should be the bulk of body paragraphs)

Repeat I & A as necessary to make your argument.

[4th Body Paragraph]

Claim:

Illustrate: “ ” (citation).

Analyze: (Your Analysis should be the bulk of body paragraphs)

Repeat I & A as necessary to make your argument.

Conclusion

Examine your body paragraphs and evaluate your findings. Do not simply restate the paper or the thesis. You want to reiterate, which is to say you want to reinforce your argument. Attempt to answer the larger “so what?” question.
